Question Box

Three quarters of the world's population do not have direct access to the Internet.

Question Box provides access to information regarding health, education and agriculture to people in areas of the world impaired by Illiteracy and language barriers.

Question box is a project by Open Mind, a non-profit organization.

What is Question Box?

Question Box is Open Mind's initiative to bring life-sustaining information regarding health, education and agriculture to people where general Internet access is nonexistent. We do this through:

- Providing direct localized assistance
- Establishing live telephone hotlines
- Utilizing new technologies such as SMS functionality

Question Box projects are tailored to both the partner and their location. Question Box projects may even utilize mobile and solar-powered technologies.

Hardware

Question Box connects people to our live Internet information service through a simple telephone intercom.

Users place a free call by pushing the Question Box's green button, connecting them to a live Operator with access to the Internet.

The Operator finds the answers to the user's questions in English and translates the information back in their local language.

Software

In conjunction with Apprica Labs, Open Mind has developed backend software to direct and manage Operator searches.

The Question Box software augments the search process, allowing Operators to search all previous answers and specialized databases prior to searching the Internet. The software is also optimized for locations with slow Internet connections.

Isaacs & Issacs Personal Injury Law

A Workplace Injury is Devastating

You give your job everything you've got. But the smallest mishap can take away everything. Your health, your income ... even your family's livelihood when they have to take care of you.

And to make matters worse, the compensation that you deserve is about to be taken away.

That's why you need to call Isaacs & Isaacs now at 1-800-800-8888 for a free consultation.

You Need a Workman's Comp Attorney... Now

When you're injured, the last thing you want to do is to delay filing your claim. Although your compensation is often based on a percentage of your weekly pay from the date of your injury, the clock is ticking.

Compensation regulations have time limits that can reduce and in some cases prevent you from receiving your due compensation. The benefits that you've worked hard for also depend on the nature of your injuries and the circumstances when the injury took place.

Your employer's workers' compensation insurance carrier will do everything they can to reduce the amount of money spent on your claim. As a result, you may not receive all the benefits that you deserve and need to move on with your life.

A Working Injury Lawyer with Experience

The working conditions, equipment safety, and your employer's workplace safety violations will also have an impact on your worker's compensation settlement.

You're going to need an experienced attorney in your corner before you are denied benefits or compensation. One who knows the ins and outs of all the regulations and can take the burden off your shoulders so you and your family can be whole again.

Vinyl Rewind

Vinyl Rewind curates and cultivates artists, performers, and unique cultural experiences from around the world. Our print magazine and online media hub act as both a gazette of life-changing live performances and a resource for up-and-coming music performers. Vinyl Rewind is our way of keeping the show going after the band finish their set, and sharing everything that music has given us with you.

Vinyl Rewind's print publication is operated by a small cadre of hardcore music fanatics who work their asses off to bring our loyal (and tremendously appreciated) audience stories and photos that document the often-crazy adventures of bands, fans, and world travelers. Our magazine also features interviews and photos with world famous performers, as well as critical reviews of live music performances and listening venues. Vinyl Rewind is a FREE magazine, distributed throughout the US to select locations. Vinyl Rewind's online media hub is a dynamic resource that features our best articles, a travel board, an online radio station, and a vibrant members network where performers can incubate their own fanbases. Vinyl Rewind Online is also fully integrated with social media, so you can spread the word and share all we have to offer on Twitter and Facebook.

In addition to our magazine and website, we offer a series of events and programs to do our share for the community, and participate in the Man Up campaign series. Finally, bands and music performers from all over the country register with Vinyl Rewind Online to play at Vinyl Fest, our seven day music and beer festival held in San Diego the last weekend in March each year.
